MAINE'S SWEEPING VERDICT.

The official returns of the late election have all been received at the office of the secretary of state, with the exception of a few remote places. These returns show [illegible] the most desperate [illegible] the Democrats ever made in this state, with the whole influence of the National Administration behind them, with an army of [illegible] and [illegible] campaign fund [illegible] Republicans have won a phenomenal victory [illegible] candidate for Governor by a majority of 18,000 over Mr. Putnam [illegible] [illegible]

Districts		Plurality
First	Reed	[illegible]
Second	Dingley	[illegible]
Third	Milliken	[illegible]
Fourth	Boutelle	[illegible]
Total		[illegible]

The Republicans have also elected every member of the Senate [illegible] members of the House [illegible] the different county officers voted for at the late election. Maine's [illegible] is therefore a crushing repudiation of Cleveland, free trade and [illegible], and the battle thus auspiciously begun in September will close in November with the election of Harrison and Morton and the triumph of protection for the American market and American labor.

Big Democratic Loss in Arkansas.

It now appears that the Democratic majority in Arkansas fell off something over [illegible] as compared with the election of 1884. This too in spite of the fact that the Democrats resorted freely to a systematic course of intimidation as will be seen from the following despatch from Little Rock:

"A reign of terror has succeeded the election outrages in [illegible] county. Eldorado is the county seat. There is neither railroad nor telegraph in [illegible]. Camden and Magnolia. The nearest railroad points are in adjoining counties. The statement of what has occurred in [illegible] county was obtained from responsible white citizens of the county who have just come from there. [illegible]

[illegible] they were met and driven back. Unless they struck a trail homeward they were shot or whipped. Jordan Gray was made to pull off his shirt and was then pounded with guns and prodded with the bayonets. He is in bed now. It was reported when I left that [illegible] persons had been killed since Sunday evening. You never saw so many scared people. A negro was killed at [illegible] on election day. At Champagnolle the ballot box was stolen by the Democrats at noon."

Our Democratic friends have trotted out the Arkansas election as an offset to the great Republican victories in Vermont and Maine, but it comes by the later returns that even with the shameful methods reported to as outlined in the above despatch the Democratic majority this year has dropped to 14,881, or a loss of [illegible] since the corresponding election in the last Presidential year. A much smaller percentage of loss in November in several states would break the solid South. In Tennessee the Democratic majority four years ago was about 7,000, in Virginia [illegible] and in West Virginia 1,400. Instead of a silly attempt to try and weaken the force of great Republican victories in states where votes are freely cast and honestly counted, the Democrats better offer some explanation of this set back in Arkansas where they resorted to all kinds of intimidation and yet were unable to come within 20,000 votes of their majority in 1884.

The free traders never tire of telling how the number of sheep have decreased in Vermont and other States under protection. The agricultural returns just issued in England show that on June 4, 1888, the number of sheep in Great Britain have decreased 430,000 in a single year. This is a nice showing for a free trade country, isn't it?

The Democratic party is against the doctrine of protection. [illegible] and [illegible] this fact will be one plank to be considered or evaded. It is a blunder to dodge the issue.

These are plain words from the Charleston Democrat and show that even the Democrats themselves appreciate the full significance of the issue in West Virginia.

Congressman Nathan Goff, Republican candidate for Governor of West Virginia, has received word from Wheeling that the Democratic State committee had declined his challenge for a joint debate with his opponent, A. B. Fleming. The leader of the Wheeling committee in refusing to let Mr. Goff have a go at Mr. Fleming as arbitrary. The Democratic chairman, Mr. [illegible] says, in his letter of declination, that Mr. Fleming is not in possession of such political information as would fit him for a general discussion of the economic and political issues involved in the present canvass.

Hello there! What's this? One of the Cramp sons, builders of some of the new naval cruisers, says: "To the inexorable requirements of the first law is due the fact that the four vessels built by Mr. John Roach—the Chicago, Boston, Atlanta and Dolphin—are built of better material than any foreign vessel afloat." Not a word about their structural weakness! What will the Navy Department, or the small portion of it that was determined that these vessels should be condemned and consigned to the scrap heap, say to this?—N. Y. Tribune.

"He laughs best who laughs last." The Democrats have the last laugh in Maine.—[illegible]

Our esteemed contemporary has some very singular notions concerning Maine. At the time of the Eastport fire it had a relief train steaming into that stricken town and its report of this unusual spectacle was published as having been telegraphed from Lubec. As there is no railroad running into Eastport or a telegraph station at Lubec the [illegible] imagination conflicted badly with the facts, just as it has in the above squib. It must have promoted that reporter to position on the editorial staff. The Democrats of Maine are not laughing to any particular extent.

Hon. [illegible] Burt, of Wheeling, West Virginia, was nominated by the Union Labor party for the office of State Auditor some time ago, and as he is a popular man and a leader among the workingmen his candidacy was regarded with a good deal of concern by both old parties, as it was a problem which of them would be most seriously affected by his being in the field. Saturday, however, he withdrew from the ticket and assigned as a reason that every interest of united labor would be enhanced by the election of Harrison and Morton, and he urges his fellow workmen to support not only these candidates, but the Republican State, Legislative and Congressional tickets, as the issue of protection, in his opinion, is paramount to every other issue in this campaign.

Another New Jersey Democratic newspaper has come out for Harrison and Morton and protection. It is the Rahway [illegible], edited by Joseph T. Crowell, one of the oldest Democrats in the State. He has preached sound pure Democracy many years, but he cannot stand free trade. It says: "The editor of the Courier, differing radically from the position of the organized Democracy in sustaining the President in his views on the question of import duties and the effects of a protective system and disagreeing with the action of the majority in Congress on this paramount issue and other questions, has, after mature deliberation, decided to support the Republican candidates for President and Vice President. He does not, however, propose to engage in any crusade against his former political associates, according to them the same honest intentions which he claims for himself."

The Mills Bill.

ITS EFFECT UPON THE VALUE OF CANADIAN TIMBER LANDS—CONDITIONAL SALES MADE AT LARGELY INCREASED PRICES.

(Special Despatch to the Boston Journal.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17. A Government official, a Democrat of long standing, who has just returned from a brief visit to the Province of Ontario, Canada, to-day, was busily engaged with members on both sides of the House who had taken an interest in the free lumber clause of the Mills bill, explaining the effect which that measure had already had upon the Canadian market. He explained as a preliminary that pine lands were not to be obtained outright in Canada [illegible]

the passage of the Mills bill. He was inclined to differ from the Ottawa Journal in thinking that "the sale would be effected." He pointed out a large number of other sales so [illegible] at greatly advanced rates. This gentleman further expressed the opinion that if Mr. [illegible] thought his free lumber clause was going to cheapen manufactured lumber to the people of the United States he was most grievously mistaken. [illegible] the Canadian mill-men who hold the "limits" on the timber bearing districts to put up their prices, as had already been done, in anticipation. This free lumber clause, he added, was the most idiotic feature of the Mills bill and the free vegetable clause was next, and both were going to lose many votes on the Canadian line.

MAINE M[illegible] MURDERED

And Thrown Into the River at Great Falls.

GREAT FALLS, N. H., Sept. 18. Charles [illegible] Rattman, a [illegible] of Berwick, mysteriously disappeared Saturday night. He had been drinking with a man named [illegible] Wells, [illegible] in the [illegible]. At one o'clock in the morning Rattman started for his home in Berwick. Wells went with him as far as the bridge. [illegible] the bridge. [illegible] Rattman's age was about thirty-two. He was married but had no children. He was a pleasant fellow and well liked.

Later—The Body was Found this morning in the river near the bridge. There were bruises on the head and traces of blood in the left eye.

No water was found in Rattman's lungs. Wells says he left Rattman at [illegible] Corner, on the Maine side, and came back over the bridge to Great Falls. A coroner's jury is now investigating and Wells is under surveillance. The post mortem examination this morning indicates death by violence. He probably did not breathe after striking the water. There was no water in the lungs. There was some clotted blood around the eyes. It is now thought that he was beaten and thrown into the river by some person. The coroner of this town has impanelled a jury. There is considerable excitement over the matter. Rattman was a member of the [illegible] Lodge of Masons.

Coroner [illegible] Held An Inquest this afternoon. Physicians testified that there was no water in Rattman's lungs or froth of any account. The skin was abraded on the forehead, just below the hair; both eyes were bruised, the left one the worst. Patches of skin were gone from the upper lip, under which the mouth [illegible] on both sides of the nose. Clotted blood was found in the angles of both eyes; a purple spot found in the groin that might have resulted from a kick or [illegible]. Dr. Swasey thought it an exceptional case and the facts found would not warrant an opinion. Dr. Hayes [illegible].

Rattman Was Dead before being thrown into the water. [illegible] Wells, who was with Rattman just before his death, tells a singular story. He says he walked with Rattman as far as [illegible] Corner. When near the bridge he said good night and turned back. He heard no more. [illegible] Rattman was [illegible] a good fellow all night. [illegible] There are no fights on the [illegible]. The coroner adjourned [illegible] until Friday evening. [illegible] It is thought singular that Wells did not hear [illegible].

FIFTIETH CONGRESS—First Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18. The Deficiency Appropriation bill was reported back from the Committee on Appropriations and ordered printed.

Mr. Sherman's resolution offered yesterday, instructing the Committee on Foreign Relations to inquire into the state of the relations of the United States with Great Britain and Canada, was taken up and Mr. Sherman proceeded to address the Senate, delivering his remarks from manuscript.

Mr. Edwards gave notice that he would follow Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, to-morrow, on the subject of the President's message.

House.

Chairman O'Neill, of the Labor Committee then secured an overwhelming majority on a proposition to refer to his committee a resolution assigning certain days of the House for the consideration of labor bills. The point of no quorum was raised in time to avoid what many of the members regard as a serious tactical error, for as the resolution would have undoubtedly been reported back favorably from the Labor Committee, opportunity would have thus been offered to secure an aye and nay vote on a proposition to amend it by setting apart a day for the consideration of the Dependent Pension bill and other general pension legislation. It is said to be this impending dilemma which has resulted in the change of opinion of many members upon the question of adjournment.

Republican Mass Meeting in New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18. The large hall at Cooper Union was filled to-night by a Republican mass meeting. There were many prominent men on the platform. Cornelius N. Bliss presided. Warner Miller was the principal speaker. He declared that the tariff agitation was simply a revival of the doctrine of State sovereignty. The Democratic party has been substantially a free trade party from Van Buren down. Nearly all its platforms favored free trade or a revenue tariff. Twenty years of prosperity under protection has compelled the Democratic party to abandon its original ground. Its leaders are still free traders, but the party [illegible]. Notwithstanding the rainy weather yesterday the excursion over the Maine Central to Bar Harbor from points all along the line east of this city, was participated in by about five hundred people and the special train that left this city at 7.30 A. ANNUAL STATE CONFERENCE

Of Maine Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor.

A Two Days Session Begun in this City Yesterday.

Through the rain, from all sections of the State came Monday enthusiastic delegations from the 180 societies of Christian Endeavor to attend their annual State Conference at the First Baptist church. The delegates are quartered at the Windsor Hotel fairly taxing the capacity of that hostelry. They are a fine set of intelligent earnest young men and women and evidently are bent on an earnest endeavor for the work. Promptly at two o'clock the conference opened with an half hour prayer meeting. A great many fervent petitions were offered for spiritual power and blessing upon the conference.

At 2.30 o'clock Rev. F. E. Barnard gave a warm greeting to the delegates, which was fittingly responded to by President V. R. Foss.

The conference then organized, the following officers serving: President, V. Richard Foss; Secretary and Treasurer, [illegible] Stevens; Assistant Secretary, M. Alice Metcalf. The President appointed the following committees:

Finance—A. E. Tucker, Bangor; W. W. Foshay, Peaks Island; Abbie H. Sawyer, Gray.

Nominations—Horace J. Reynolds, Augusta; Emily Robinson, Augusta; Frank [illegible], Machias.

Resolutions—W. H. Gardner, Bangor; Alice Metcalf, Portland; Ada F. [illegible], Winthrop.

Credentials—M. Mabel Lowell, Portland; Annie F. Burns, Old Town; N. [illegible], Lewiston.

Entertainment—Fred K. Brown, Bangor; [illegible] Burr, Bangor; Ida M. Webb, Bangor.

Then followed reports of the State officers as follows:

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

Dear Fellow workers—The past year has, under God, been one of constant blessing and fruitfulness. Our infant organization by careful nourishing has grown to be a stripling of no mean valor. [illegible] Oh, what victories are in store for us in winning the lost to Christ and training them for soldiers in His army! I trust the spirit of these meetings may be that of complete consecration and that from every heart may go up the prayer "Lord what wilt thou have me do?"

You will be given interesting statistical facts regarding our growth, in the Secretary's report. [illegible]

[illegible]

We desire to sincerely thank all who have in any way rendered by kind word or work, assistance during the year, especially to our faithful Secretary and Treasurer, who has been exceedingly efficient in the performance of his duties.

Respectfully submitted,

V. RICHARD FOSS, Prest.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Nothing is more interesting than watching the growth and development of a child. And so to us there is great delight in watching the growth of that now vigorous child so appropriately christened "Christian Endeavor." In observing these two, the child of our flesh, and the child of the church's need, we will find a close analogy in the growth of each. Growth is the effect, life and organization the primary and secondary causes. Life is the power, organization the agent of its manifestation and action.

In Maine we find from one society at Williston church in 1882, the societies had grown in 1883 to 2[illegible], in 1884 to 7[illegible], in 1886 to [illegible], in 1887 to [illegible] and in 1888 to 170. [illegible]

[illegible]

It must never be forgotten however that organization essential as it is, is not the supreme element in growth. Life is first and chief and this is found in the earnest Christian purpose and indwelling, in a powerful energy in the hearts of our young people. Neither must it be forgotten that the Christian energy is robbed largely of its efficiency if not coupled with and working through a wise organization.

In making comparisons between the conversions of the two years it is proper to say that the reports for 1888 are very incomplete in any societies replying to the question "can you report any conversions" by a simple "yes."

In looking over the reports some facts are presented which may be sometimes fruitful subjects of inquiry. For example in the large majority of societies the associate membership is much smaller than the active, there are a few however in which the reverse is the case and that too with ... [illegible]

Again in a comparison between the number of active members and of church members facts somewhat similar appear. A very few societies report church membership less than half the active membership [illegible]

[illegible]

George M. Ward, Esq., of Boston, National Secretary, was introduced to the conference and gave a vivid account of the great National Convention held in Chicago.

The last hour of the afternoon session was occupied by reports from the societies represented. Nearly all the reports indicated progress. In every church where the work has been properly introduced and supported blessings have followed. The meeting closed by singing "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord." The singing was a special feature of the meeting. It is in charge of Miss Cary, of Bath, Miss Swett presiding at the organ.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening meeting was begun at 7.30 after a well attended praise meeting which was held at 7 o'clock. There was a large attendance notwithstanding that the weather was very unfavorable, as it rained all the evening.

President Foss, read a portion of the sixth chapter of Matthew and then Rev. A. P. Dunn, of Portland, led in an earnest prayer.

Miss Annie Sample rendered "Santa Maria" in her usual pleasing and finished manner, at the conclusion of the prayer and then at the suggestion of President Foss the reports from the different delegates, left over from the afternoon for the evening were put off until another time. A collection was taken up and then Mr. Foss introduced George M. Ward, Esq., General Secretary of the United Society, as the speaker of the evening.

Mr. Ward spoke in substance as follows: On the shoulders of each one of us rests the work of bringing the world to Christ and that is the mission of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor. There are questions to-day that are agitating the church but they are not to be settled in one generation, they will go over to another and another, but finally come to a harmonious settlement. In these the young people must take a part, and upon them rests a great share of responsibility in their result. The young people of this country are now banding together to make all the world for Christ, for however much we may love our own country there is no other land to which the world must be directed. The Christian Endeavor Society wants to turn out trained soldiers to fight for Christ, and that it is now trying to do.

It has been said that the reason that the efforts of the Endeavor societies have been [illegible] is due to the [illegible] of our [illegible], and we ask them now to take themselves so that [illegible]. How shall we fulfil the mission of Christian Endeavor? God does not ask us to leave our homes like the Crusaders, or to make hermits of ourselves, but to work at home among those in our midst. Work that is worth doing is worth doing well, and surely you will agree with me that Christ's work is prayer meeting and impart those to others. We give time, thought, study and effort to gain money, and why should we not put forth some of these to our Master. It is for Christ we must labor and not for ourselves. [illegible] to urge upon you the work for Christ who is so watchful over and so kind to us.

We are not called upon at the present day to gird up our loins and to go forth and fight but we are asked to have faith in our Master and to labor for Him to bring new converts to His faith.

The address by Mr. Ward was very interesting and was closely listened to by all. [illegible]

[illegible]

At the conclusion of the evening meeting all of the delegates present were invited by Mr. Fred Brown of the Bangor society to the church parlors where a reception was to be held. The reception was a very informal affair and was held in order that the delegates might become acquainted with each other. The parlors were filled and the reception proved very pleasant [illegible]

This medicine is an Alterative, and causes a radical change in the system. The process in some cases, may not be quite so rapid as in others. But, with persistence, the result is certain. Read these testimonials: —

For two years I suffered from a severe pain in my right side, and had other troubles caused by a torpid liver and dyspepsia. Grover's Little Lamb.

Grover had a little lamb,
Just like the nursery maid,
With English shears he clipped its wool,
And called the lamb "Free Trade."

Said Grover, "Dan, we'll find some day,
When at the lamb we peep,
That in our care it's grown to be
A rousing British sheep."

The lamb got into Congress once,
And lost its precious wool,
The Democrats there cut it off,
To please old Johnny Bull.

And when the fall elections came,
Said Grover, "Daniel, dear,
We'll hear now from that little lamb
Which once we loved so dear.

"I wonder if the fleece has grown?
I think not, Dan, don't you?
We clipped it very close, you know,
For England told us to."

And while the President still had
His little lamb in mind,
A something like a cyclone struck
Him very hard behind.

Cried Grover, "Daniel, what was that
I'm all broke up, I am.
Was it a cyclone on the jump?"
"No, Grover, 'twas the lamb."

They bound a red bandanna on
The bruised and bleeding spot,
They tried to whisper words of cheer,
But cheered he would be not.

And when they raised him up to see
His fleece-robbed little lamb,
He found that it had grown to be
A big protection ram.

What made the lamb butt Grover so?"
The children asked at school,
It was because" the teacher said
"He robbed it of its wool."

And not a soul in all the land
For Grover then was sad
Such is the simple story of
The lamb that Grover had.

Mr. Meeson's Will.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD

Quite so, old fellow," said Eustace, but do you know as it happens I am a client—and a big one, too. It is a matter of two millions of money—my uncle's fortune. There was another will and I want to take your advice.

Mr Short fairly bounded out of his chair in exultation and then struck by another thought sunk back into it again.

My dear Meeson he said, I am sorry I cannot hear you.

Eh, said Eustace, what do you mean?

I mean that you are not accompanied by a solicitor and it is not the etiquette of the profession to which I belong to see a client unaccompanied by a solicitor.

Oh hang the etiquette of the profession!"

My dear Meeson, if you came to me as a friend I should be happy to give you any legal information in my power, and I flatter myself that I know something of matters connected with probate. But you yourself have said that you come as a client and in that case the personal relationship sinks into the background and is superseded by the official relationship. Under these circumstances it is evident that the etiquette of the profession intervenes which overmastering force compels me to point out to you how improper and contrary to precedent it would be for me to listen to you without the presence of a properly qualified solicitor."

Oh Lord!" gasped Eustace. "I had no idea that you were so particular. I thought that perhaps you would be glad of the job."

Certainly—certainly! In the present state of my practice" as he glanced at the solitary brief. I should be the last to wish to turn away work. Let me suggest that you should go and consult my brother John in the Poultry. I believe business is rather slack with him just now, so I think it probable that you will find him disengaged. Indeed I dare say that I may go so far as to make an appointment for him here—let us say in an hour's time. Stop. I will consult my clerk. Dick.

The infant appeared.

I believe that I have no appointment for this morning?"

No sir said Dick with a twinkle in his eye. One moment, sir, I will consult the book and he vanished to return presently with the information that Mr. Short's time was not under any contributions that day.

Very good said Mr Short, "then make an entry of an appointment with Mr. John Short and Mr. Meeson at 2 precisely."

Yes sir," said Dick departing to the unaccustomed task.

As soon as Eustace had departed from Tweedledum to Tweedledee or in other words, from James barrister to John solicitor Dick was again summoned and bade to go to a certain Mr. Thomson on the next floor. Mr. Thomson had an excellent library, which had come to him by will. On the strength of this bequest he had become a barrister at law, and the object of Dick's visit was to request the loan of the eighth volume of the Statutes Revised containing Wills act of 1 Vic cap 26. Brown on Probate," Dixon on Probate and Powles on Brown," to the study of which valuable books Mr. James Short devoted himself earnestly while awaiting his client's return.

Meanwhile Eustace had made his way in a twopenny bus to one of those busy courts in the city where Mr. John Short practiced as a solicitor. Mr. Short's office was, Eustace discovered by referring to a notice board on the seventh floor of one of the tallest houses he had ever seen. However up he went with a stout heart, and after some five minutes of a struggle, that reminded him forcibly of climbing the hill to of a Cornish mine he arrived at a little door right at the top of the house on which was painted Mr. John Short, solicitor. Eustace knocked and the door was opened by a small boy, so like the small boy he had seen at Mr. James Short's chambers at the Temple that he fairly started. Afterward the mystery was explained. Like their masters, the two small boys were brothers.

Mr. John Short was within, and Eustace was ushered into his presence. To all appearances he was consulting a voluminous mass of correspondence written on large sheets of brief paper but when he looked at it closely it seemed to Eustace that the edges of the paper were very yellow and that the ink was much faded. This however was not to be wondered at seeing that Mr. John Short had taken them over with the other fixtures of the office.

CHAPTER XVI.

SHORT ON LEGAL ETIQUETTE.

Well Meeson, what is it? Have you come to ask me to lunch?" asked Mr. John Short. Do you know I actually thought that you might have been a client?

"Well, by Jove! old fellow and so I am," answered Eustace. "I have been to your brother and he has sent me on to you, because he says that it is not the etiquette of the profession to see a client unless a solicitor is present, so he has referred me to you.

Perfectly right, perfectly right of my brother James, Meeson. Considering how small are his opportunities of becoming cognizant with the practice of his profession, it is extraordinary how well he is acquainted with its theory. And now, what is the point?"

"Well, do you know, Short, as the point is rather a long one, and that your brother said he should expect us at 2 precisely. I think that we had better take the bus back to the Temple, when I can tell the yarn to both of you at once."

"Very well. I do not, as a general rule, like leaving my office at this time of day, as it is apt to put clients to inconvenience, especially such of them as come from a distance. But I will make an exception for you, Meeson. William," he went on, to the counterpart of the Pump court infant, "if any one calls to see me will you be so good as to tell them that I am engaged in an important conference at the chambers of Mr. Short in Pump court, but that I hope to be back by half past 3." carcat he saw a [illegible] chambers [illegible]. He would, indeed, have preferred it if the solicitor had not happened to be his twin brother, and the client had been some other than his intimate friend; but still it was a blessed sight—a very blessed sight!

"Will you be seated, gentlemen?" he said, with much dignity.

They obeyed.

"And now, Meeson, I suppose you have explained to my brother the matter on which you require my advice?"

"No, I haven't," said Eustace. "I thought that I might as well explain it to you both together, eh?"

"Hum," said James, "it is not quite regular. According to the etiquette of the profession to which I have the honor to belong, it is not customary that matters should be so dealt with. It is usual that papers should be presented, but that I will overlook, as the point appears to be pressing."

"That's right," said Eustace. "Well, I have come about a will."

"So I understood," said James; "but what will, and where is it?"

"Well, it's a will in my favor, and it is tattooed on a lady's back."

The twins simultaneously rose from their chairs and looked at Eustace with such a ridiculous identity of movement and expression that he fairly burst out laughing.

"I presume, Meeson, that this is not a hoax," said James, severely. "I presume that you know too well what is due to learned counsel to attempt to make one of their body the victim of a practical joke!"

"Surely, Meeson," added John, "you have sufficient respect for the dignity of the law not to tamper with it in any such way as my brother has indicated?"

"Oh, certainly not. I assure you it is all square. It is a true bill, or rather a true will."

"Proceed," said James, resuming his seat. "This is evidently a case of an unusual nature."

"You are right there old boy," said Eustace. "And now, just listen," and he proceeded to unfold his moving tale with much point and emphasis.

When he had finished, John looked at James rather helplessly. The case was beyond him. But James was equal to the occasion. He had mastered that first great axiom which every young barrister should lay to heart: "Never appear to be ignorant."

THE MILLIONAIRE'S SECRET. "The secret of success," said the prince of American millionaires, "is very simple. Keep out of debt, keep your head cool and your bowels open." Thus in twelve words of wisdom was summed up the policy which turned a poor boy into a hundred-millionaire. Success often hinges upon as small a manner as the state of the bowels. So, you see that Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are not only the royal road to health, but to wealth and happiness as well. d&w1w sept11

Sutherland & Donald, Clothiers, are offering $10.00 Fall Overcoats for $6.88—a great Bargain.

Doomed to die, and oh so young
Is there nothing that can save
This poor, hopeless sufferer
From the dark and cruel grave?
Comes an answer: "Yes there is
'Favorite Prescription' try,
It has saved the lives of thousands
Who were given up to die."

For all diseases, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the standard remedy, and no woman should despair of recovery until she has given it a trial. d&w sept11

Get rid of that tired feeling as quick as possible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives strength, a good appetite, and health.

PHOSPHATES IN BAKING POWDERS. Prof. H. C. White, State Chemist of Georgia, gave this subject attention and wrote: "I have been familiar for a number of years with the general character of Prof. Horsford's phosphatic preparations. Recent examinations made by me of his baking powder show it to be exactly what is claimed for it. When mixed with water a double phosphate is formed and remains in the bread when baked. In ordinary cream tartar baking powders the substance left in the bread after raising is rochelle salts—a double tartrate. The phosphates are useful substances in animal nutrition and growth, the tartrates are not. In my opinion, the phosphatic powder is therefore, preferable to the others so far as healthfulness is concerned." sept11 d&w1m

The use of calomel for derangements of the liver has ruined many a fine constitution. Those who, for similar troubles, have tried Ayer's Pills testify to their efficacy in thoroughly remedying the malady without injury to the system. d&w1w

When you find your strength is failing,
In some strange mysterious way
When your cheek is slowly paling
And "Poor thing" the neighbors say
As they look at you in pity
To the nearest drug store send,
At the earliest chance, and get a
Bottle of the Sick Man's Friend.

You will get what you want by asking for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This medicine tones up and invigorates the weakened system by purifying the blood and restoring lost vigor. d&w1w sept11

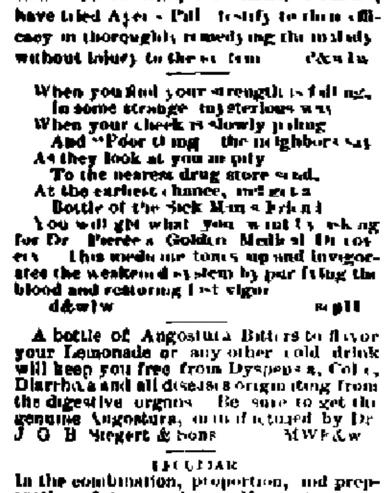

A bottle of Angostura Bitters to flavor your Lemonade or any other cold drink will keep you free from Dyspepsia, Colic, Diarrhoea and all diseases originating from the digestive organs. Be sure to get the genuine Angostura, manufactured by Dr. J. G. B. Siegert & Sons. MWF&w

PECULIAR. In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.
